SANDY MARKER TOUR GUIDE

As a small child I dreamt of visiting India, which held a special family significance and personal enchantment for me. I wanted to see where my grandfather spent most of his working career. I recall clearly, his tales of grand palaces, bustling markets, cows roaming the streets in cities that never slept.

As my grandfather would unpack his elaborate travel trunk he displayed beautiful silk smoking jackets, ties and cravats etc, each with a lingering perfume of sandalwood and spices. So my childhood curiosity had to be fulfilled. It took more years than I hoped before I made my first visit to India to experience these wonderful sights. I was not to be disappointed, the magic of my childhood memories was brought to life in a profusion of colours, aromas and the energy of life seen there.
